Choosing an emphasis of study:

Emphasis 1: Sociology
Students interested in working within the fields of applied social research, non-profit work, business, law, health professions, human resource management, community activism/social justice work, or planning to pursue graduate work in sociology should choose Emphasis 1: Sociology. Students in the Sociology emphasis can compete some of the social services courses if they so choose.

This emphasis can be completed through coursework offered completely on the Statesboro or Armstrong campuses. Note that elective options will be different across campuses.

Emphasis 2: Social Services
Students interested in working in the Social Services field and/or in pursuing a graduate degree in Social Work should choose Emphasis 2: Social Services.

This emphasis will require the student to complete some of their coursework on the Statesboro campus. Note that elective options will be different across campuses.

Advising:
Students are expected to meet with their advisor every semester to help them devise a plan to complete courses in a timely fashion to graduate. Deviations from this program plan or failure to earn passing grades may result in a delayed graduation date.
